2024 YEAR-END RECAP

MARKET OVERVIEW

2024 was expected by many to be the year mortgage interest rates would trend down. In August – September rates temporarily dropped below 6.5%, but most of the year they were in the upper 6% range. Since the Fed started raising rates in 2022, the number of home sales dropped significantly from what we saw during the pandemic years. There was a small drop in property values in 2nd half 2022. But over the last two years, values have held up well and in 2024 there was also a modest 10% uptick in the number of sales.

Park City home buyer demand vs. supply is healthy with less than a 6-month supply for single family homes and less than 3-months for townhomes. While inventory levels are relatively low, it is important to keep in mind that supply varies both by neighborhood and price range.

For example; Old Town with 28 homes currently for sale, had 34 sales in 2024, representing a 9.7 month supply. At the same time, Silver Springs area, which includes Snyders Mill and Ranch Place had 32 sales last year and 3 active listings as of Dec 31. By Price Range: For homes up to $3m, there is about a 3-month supply. This jumps to about a 6.5 month supply for homes prices $3m - $8m and jumps again to an 18 month supply for homes priced above $8m.

SILVER CREEK PULSE

Silver Creek homes can vary quite a bit in lot size, house size, age of the home and out buildings or horse facilities. There are typically 17 home sales in Silver Creek each year.

So, like most of the market, sales in 2022 and 2023 were below average. Values in Silver Creek are holding steady and are above any previous year in history.
